The Merino is an exclusive breed that traces its origins to the early Monarchs of Spain.

Merino were introduced to New Zealand by the great English explorer, Captain James Cook, when we were discovered in 1773. They have thrived here ever since.

The Merino are farmed in the mountains of New Zealand, where they are best known for producing the world's finest woollen fleece. Few people know that the world's finest fleece hides such a uniquely luxurious leather.

MAZINO™ Merino Lamb leather is crafted to showcase the material's natural pebble character; perfectly suited for shoes, bags, leather goods and garments.
